Before a wild night of dancing or indulging in bottle service with friends, we locals love going out to dinner.

Whether you take a hot date or a big group of friends, dining out is an essential precursor to a fun night about town. From quaint Italian bistros to grill-your-own steak lounges, San Diego is full of unique dining options. But, did you ever stop to wonder if it's necessary to eat before you get to the club?

Many of your favorite nightclubs serve much more than bottles of Grey Goose. Dining at San Diego clubs not only satisfies the palate, it gets you a complimentary dessert spread of VIP party perks.

Share sushi at On Broadway's Zen Café and walk right into the club, cover-free. Treat yourself to an entrée and martini at the Restaurant at Stingaree, and not only do you get into the club for free, you can watch the jealous party-goers waiting in line while you dine. From Anthology to Voyeur and the W Hotel, all your favorite clubs in San Diego offer trendy alternatives for pre-party dining.

The Restaurant at Side Bar

The velvety-chic and sultry aesthetic makes Side Bar a go-to club for appetizers or dinner before a night on the dance floor. While the addictive décor is over-the-top, Side Bar's dinner menu goes back to the basics with burgers, pizza, Panini sandwiches, and salads. We recommend starting with the Side Bar Sampler (wings, beef skewers, toasted ravioli) to share, and ordering the 100% all natural black angus beef Bacon Burger, stuffed with apple smoked bacon and cheddar cheese, topped with barbeque sauce and onion rings, for yourself. There are no hidden rooms in this petite club – your dinner is served on mid-action tall tables in the lounge or in the more reserved VIP booths. At Side Bar, once you're in, you're in – come early to dine, stay late to party.
